Synopsis

Being the further adventures of a fictional, poorly drawn cat (Bubble Bubble Meows) as he and his buddies work to reverse a new fashion trend's unfortunate side effects. This is the second of three Bubble Bubble Meows motion pictures.

The epic adventures of a poorly drawn animated cat, Bubble Bubble Meows, as he and his friends go on a quest to rid his town of infantile talking caused by people wearing giant diapers on their heads. Along the way, they meet a hot dog Danish, sad bean sack, tribe of island graham crackers, and a pizza in a dump truck. Completely appropriate for children of all ages, as well as adults who like bizarre and random humor.

Matt Orefice Filmography

Seattle filmmaker Matt Orefice is the author of several vanity-press books, including a series for children (or simple adults), which follows the adventures of a fictional and poorly drawn cat named Bubble Bubble Meows.

He tried to sneak on the set of "Helas Pour Moi" but couldn't find it. He was once publicly humiliated by the late magician Doug Henning during Mr. Henning's Broadway performance. He is a big Leslie Townes Hope (also known as Packy East) fan.

The Bubble Bubble Meows movie series (there are three of them!) were made with an intended audience of one: Matt's son, Henry. Henry isn't allowed to see any of them until he turns two years old.
